The third lesson the spider teaches is: III. Patience. The spider builds a new web, spreads her sticky threads, and finishes all her plans for catching flies. She waits hour after hour, day after day, and week after week sometimes, before a single fly comes near. All this time she has nothing to eat, and yet she does not seem to grow restless or discontented. She waits with patience. Sometimes a bad neighbour will come to take part of the food she has laid up. Then there is a fight, and in the conflict the spider has the misfortune to lose a leg. This causes her great pain, and she crawls away into some quiet corner for ten days or a fortnight, till a new leg grows in the place of the old one. All this she bears without seeming to lose her temper. She waits patiently for better days. Here is a lesson we should never forget. I dont know anything that tries childrens patience more than going without food. You go home at noon and dinner is not ready. You are hungry and dont like to wait. Remember the spider, and have patience. A little boy had a sum to do the other day that required a little thought. I knew he could do it very well if he would have patience and think about it. But he was in a great hurry and ambitious to have it done first. He..
