Bright Pen. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 378 pages. Dimensions: 9.2in. x 6.1in. x 0.8in. In Part Four - Convalescence Stephen takes Chaz for a drive up into the hills, where they exchange further confidences and reveal some of their feelings for each other. These leave Stephen wondering even more about himself, which is compounded after a discussion about sharing expenses while Chas stays with Stephen, during which Chaz states they were effectively living together. Chaz's friends continue to visit while he stays with Stephen. Stephen becomes much more closely involved with them and eventually Rusty asks for Stephen's help with a computer problem at work. Stephen is able to oblige. A little later he is able to help Rusty again, this time immediately prior to a business journey Rusty is to undertake. A crisis develops when it becomes clear that both Rusty and David are close to exhaustion, although the reason is not immediately clear. Stephen and Chaz persuade the other two to reveal what is so worrying them. They are astonished to learn that David is to be transferred to work in Heckford and that Rusty's firm will be re-locating to a site closer to Heckford than Heckwyke. TV producer Craig then asks for Stephen's assistance to write some software for a new series his company has been commissioned to make. This involves Craig's chief editor, Darren, who visits Stephen's home and stays overnight. After a month of convalescence the plaster cast is removed from Chaz's injured leg, although the leg is not yet strong enough to mount the 42 stairs to Chaz's own flat. Stephen accompanies Chaz on a daily walking routine to strengthen the leg. While his leg was in plaster Chaz was not able to lift his leg high enough to sit on the...
